Bottom Screenshot: Shows a response email from Ahmad Ghouri to Siti Zulaikha. The email is dated "Sen, 18 Sep 2023, 04.55". The content of the email is as follows:

Dear Zulaikha,

Many thanks for the effort. However, there are still some issues.

1. Ensure British English spellings.
2. I can see that some non-English words are still not italicised for example fiqh and translation is not provided. Implement changes to all such words in the article.
3. In footnotes, pay attention to the italicisation of book names and their translations, and single quotation are marks needed for articles and their translations.

Best Regards,
Ahmad

Hi Siti,

You have done most of it but there are still issues. See attached file with my comments. You will need to go through the entire article to ensure full compliance with our Author Guide. All non-English words need English translation when they are used for the first time in your paper. I have highlighted some that need translation but there might be other too. Also, in footnotes, all article titles must not be italicised and single quotation marks must be used with both original title and translation. For books, book names must be italicised, place of publication, publisher name and year of publication as well as relevant page number of each cited book must be provided.

Please send the final version when its ready.

Best Regards,

Ahmad

Dear Siti

Many thanks. Incidentally, I have just now received your article back from the reviewer. Please see attached version where the reviewer have made some good edits to the paper and required further sources to be added by you. Please add those sources and highlight them in a different colour s that the reviewer can see what you have added.

I will wait for the updated article.

Best Regards,

Ahmad
