CHAPTER I
INTRODUCTION

A. Background of The Study

English is one of language in this world. Nowadays, many of people use English Language as the first, second or foreign language to communicate with the others. Language is a tools of communication that use by people to communicate each other. As we know that Indonesia is one of country that applied the English language to communicate some people, for example with tourism or to speak with the native speakers when meet in some place. English language is used as the material of the curriculum almost for all of the school in Indonesia, start from the Kindergarten, Elementary school until to the University or Academy.

However, we know that in this modern era so many foreign people come to Indonesia to work, to study, to make the business or just to make the holiday. If we cannot understand what the speaker present or the writer mean, so we will be misunderstanding even do not know the meaning totally.

There are four skill which are taught in the teaching and learning English. Those are listening, speaking, reading and writing. These kinds cannot stand alone. They need language components, for example: grammar, vocabulary, pronunciation, to support each skill. Without these language component, those skill will not be perfect. As we know that writing is the most important skill in teaching and learning English. Besides, grammar mastery is important thing in writing text. Without the correct usage of grammar, the written text will not be understood by the readers, because in written form we do not have direct interaction with the readers as we usually do in speaking.

Writing is a process that involve putting the main ideas of something to make a clause, phrase, sentence, and paragraph. To explore or to convey the knowledge of someone by writing on the paper. The purpose of writing is to explore the main idea of someone to inform the reader of the content that include in the topic that have been written. Moreover, writing is one of the difficult skill in teaching and learning English, because when someone want to write something, they must know what the topic, how about the structure of grammar and should have much vocabulary to increase their mind to write as much as possible with the correct grammar and make a good writing.

One of the problem in writing is difficult to use of correct grammar. However, grammar is one of important component to wrote something to make a good writing, for example preposition.

The usage of preposition is dominant error made by the students when they want to write some types of text such as narrative or recount text. Preposition is one of part of speech that use to state the time or the place and the others. The function of preposition is to make clear the explanation about something. So many kinds of preposition that can be use in writing text. However, the preposition that usually used by the students is preposition of time and place. For example: at, in, on, etc. When the preposition is wrong, the meaning of something will be change.

Writing recount text is one of the material at the SMPN 3 Batanghari Lampung Timur. The students learn about the recount text, the generic structure, and kinds of preposition that used to state the time and place in the recount text is. However, based on the writer’s experience when do the pre-survey at SMPN 3 Batanghari Lampung Timur, there are many students who have problem in the writing recount text. Generally, they did not know about kinds of preposition that used in writing recount text. Preposition is often use in sentence especially in writing recount text, there are information about preposition of time and place.

In this case, the writer did the pre-survey at SMPN 3 Batanghari Lampung Timur, among the eight grade, in recount text material. The writer did the pre-survey among 32 students. Based on the data pre-survey, the writer got the data score of English pre-test of writing recount text of the students in VIII 2 class.
It can look at the table below:

Based on the data pre survey above, we can see that the students get the high score as much 9.37%, then the students get average score as much 15.63%, and the percentage of student’s mastery in recount text that obtains low grade as much 75%. The result shows that the lower score that gets by students as much 24 students. So, it means that the students still have many difficulties in writing recount text. The writer could identify the problem faced by the students related to language form. One of the most obvious problems is the student’s have less in understanding about language form, structure and grammar mastery, especially of the use of preposition in writing recount text.

We can see that it is difficult to use the correct prepositions in a foreign language. For example, the students prefer to write “at Sunday” it should be “on Sunday”. At it is used to explain the time and the specific part of the day. On is used for explain the to show the day of week, the day of the month or period. At the same time, English preposition have very similar uses but different functions. The students do not understand yet about the generic structure in writing recount text, have lack of vocabulary to explore their ideas and less of knowledge of the grammar especially on using the preposition.

Therefore, the writer did the research on the title “An Error Analysis on Using Preposition in Writing Recount Text among the Eighth Grade at SMPN 3 Batanghari Lampung Timur.”

B. Focus on The Study

C. Research Question

There are some research questions of this research. Those are:

2. Why do they make errors on using preposition in writing recount text among the eighth graders at SMPN 3 Batanghari Lampung Timur?
D. Objectives of the Study

There are some objective of the study, as follows:

1. To know the kinds of error commonly committed by the students using preposition in writing recount text among the eighth grade at SMPN 3 Batanghari Lampung Timur.

2. To find the reasons or the factor caused by the students using preposition in writing recount text among the eighth graders at SMPN 3 Batanghari Lampung Timur.

E. Benefits of the Study

3. For the other researcher

   a) As the information in order to be used by all of the people.

   b) As the reference to the other researcher who will do the research in the future.
F. Prior Research

The first, in research about undergraduate thesis by Suyadi, from faculty of teacher training and education, English Education Study Program, of Batanghari University, entitled “An Analysis of Students’ Writing Skills in Recount Text At The Eighth Grade Students of SMP Negeri 2 KOTA Jambi”. This research is aimed at improving teaching Writing Skills for Recount Text especially Junior High School students at SMP Negeri 2 Kota Jambi. By using qualitative method this research tries to reveal some difficulties faced by the students in writing Recount Text and giving a resolution to overcome its difficulties. The researcher builds complex, holistic picture, analyze words, reports detailed views of informants, and conducts the study in a natural setting. Findings of this research is considered to be good in category with the percentage of students’ level skills is 6% in very good level, 14% classified in good level, 22% classified in fair level, 28% classified in weak level and 30% classified in poor level. The students’ of writing skills in recount text that weak category, because the students have learnt recount text more than 4 meetings and the teacher have explained seriously. The findings of the research will be useful for the English teachers and the students at Junior High School in using its results as teaching strategy and learning material for the teacher and the students as well.¹

¹Suyadi,” An Analysis of Students, “Writing Skills in Recount Text At The Eighth Grade Students of SMP Negeri 2 Kota Jambi” : Journal of English Language Teaching,(Jambi:English Education Study Progrm, Faculty Of Teachers Training And Education, Batanghari University), Vol.1/No.1, P.114
The second prior research from Rika Dartiara, from State Institute For Islamic Studies of Metro, Lampung, entitled “The Use Of Reflective Journal Writing In Teaching Writing Through Recount Text At The Tenth Grade Student Of Sman 1 Pagelaran Lampung”. The research aims to analyze the process of using reflective journal writing through recount text at SMAN 1 Pagelaran and to analyze the students’ problems in writing reflective journal through recount text. This was a case study. The data were collected by observation, documentation, and interview. The research was conducted in SMAN 1 Pagelaran Lampung from July 31st 2015 to September 9th 2015. The participants involved in the research consisted of 32 students of X.2. In this case the researcher focused on six students. The process of teaching learning activity was conducted for six meetings. The result of this study showed that the process of using reflective journal writing in teaching writing through recount text in X.2 run well. The students’ writing task of reflective journal revealed that the use of reflective journal writing affected their writing.2

The last prior research in an undergraduate thesis by Selvia Lisa Asni and Susi Susanti, from from STKIP Al-Azhar Diniyyah, Jambi, Indonesia, entitled “An Analysis of Grammatical Errors In Writing Recount Text AT The Eight Grade of SMP Negeri 20 Kota Jambi”. This study aims to analyze and classify the types or mistakes of students using simple past tense in writing recount text. In addition, this study also aims to identify the cause of errors made by the students using simple past tense in writing recount text. This research used qualitative method with case study approach. Furthermore, the researchers chose the 8th grade students and observed 26 students. The researchers used a written test and interviews to gain the data from student participants and an English teacher participant. Based on this research, it is found that students do all kinds of errors (omission, addition, selection and misordering). The type of error most often done by the students was omission error with 166 errors or 38.97%. The second position was a selection error with 162 errors or 38.03%. The third position was the addition error with 67 errors or 15.73%. Then the last error was misordering error with 31 errors or 7.28%. In addition, the errors were caused by the complexity of the English system itself and not because of the influence of the Indonesian system (intralingual transfer). Moreover, students lacked of understanding of the grammar that became the cause of the error. In this study, most students did not understand verb forms (present and past form of the verbs) as well as the proper use of “be” in a sentence. This suggested that students had difficulty with the use of grammar in writing.3

Based on the three prior researches above, in this research the writer want to continue the research and focuses to investigate the grammatical error in some difficulties that students face during writing recount text. Yet, here the writer just focus on analysis of using the preposition error only. This research did at SMPN 3 Batanghari Lampung Timur. The writer will use the qualitative research. In this research the writer use some instrument of research such as interview, documentation, and observation. Therefore, the writer proposes a research entitled “An Error Analysis on Using Preposition in Writing Recount Text among the Eighth Grade at SMPN 3 Batanghari Lampung Timur”.

A. The Concept of Error Analysis

1. The Definition of Error

Human learning is fundamentally a process that involves the making of mistakes. Mistakes, misjudgment, miscalculations, and erroneous assumptions from an important aspect of learning virtually any skill or acquiring informations. In this world, learning a foreign language is very different way from learning with our mother tongue. That is the one of reasons is natural and unavoidable when the students make error in learning a foreign language. Thus, it is impossible that learner never make some errors in language learning activities. Yet, the errors in learning the foreign language teaching is difficult to avoid especially in learning English.

In the fact, learner do the error, and that these error can be observed, analyzed, and classified to reveal something of the system operating within the learner, led to a surge of study learners error, called “error analysis”.¹

H. Douglash Brown states that, an error as a noticeable deviation from the adult grammar of a native speaker, reflects the competence of the learner. An error that reveals a portions of the learner’s competence in the target language. So, in learning English that has the different level each other, automatically each levels of the learning process has the different cause of error was made by the students.

In line, Broughton Geoffrey states that the argument in its strong form runs that a learner must make errors as an unavoidable and necessary part of the learning process, so errors are not the bad thing once thought but visible proof that learning is taking place.

However, Corde in Rod Ellis noted that errors could be significant in three ways: (1) they provide the teacher with information about how much the learner had learnt, (2) they provide the researcher with evidence of how language was learnt, (3) they served as devices by which the learner discovered the rules of the target language.

Besides, Heidi Dulay state that “error are the flawed side of learner speech or writing. They are those part or composition that deviate from some selected norm of mature language performance”.

From the definition above the writer can conclude that error analysis is a study to identify or describe the error and cause of error that made by the students such as in their speaking or writing. The purpose is to know what factor and how the steps to do the error analysis.

2. The Differences Between Error and Mistake

   An error refers to the result of one’s systematic competence (the learner competence is incorrect), an error can not be self-corrected.\(^6\) It means that lack of knowledge and it represented lack of competence. When a mistake refers to a performance errors that is random guess or a slip in that is in failure and utilize a known system correctly.\(^7\) It means that mistake is when students fail to perfome their competence well. Mistake is can be self corrected.

3. Source of Error

   Having examined procedures of error analysis used to identify errors in second language learner production the data, the final steps in the analysis of errornous learner speech is that of determining the source of error. By trying the source we can take another step toward understanding how the learners cognitive and affective processes relate to the linguistics system and to formulate an integrated understanding of the process of second language acquisition. There are some source of error,\(^8\) those are:

\(^7\)Ibid, p. 257

\(^8\)Ibid, p. 263-266
a. Interlingual Transfer

Interlingual transfer is a significant source of error for all learners. The beginning stage of learning a second language acquisition are especially vulnerable to interlingual transfer from the native language or interference. In these early stage, before the system of the second language is familiar, the native language is the only previous linguistics system upon which the learner can draw.

b. Intralingual Transfer

One of the major contributions of learner language research has been its recognition of sources of error that extend beyond interlingual errors in learning a second language. It is now clear that intralingual transfer is a major factor in language learning. The analysis of intralingual error in corpus of production data can become quite complex. Jack richard on Brown H Douglash states that provided a list of typical English intralingual error in the use of articles these are not exhaustive either, but are examples of some of the errors commonly encountered in English learners from disparate native language background. Both Tylor’s and Richard lists are restricted to English, but clearly, their counterparts exist in other language.

c. Context of Learning

The third major source of error, although it overlaps both types of transfer, is the context of learning. “context” refers for example to the classroom with the teacher and its material in the case of school learning or the social situation in the case of untutored second language learning. In a classroom context the teacher or the textbook can lead the learner to make faulty hypotheses about the language, what Richar called “false concept” and what stensons termed “induced error”. Students often make errors because of a misleading explanation from the teacher, faulty presentation of a structure or word in a textbook, or even because of a pattern that was rotely memorized in a drill but improperly contextualized.

d. Communication Strategies

Communication strategies were defined and related to learning styles. Learners obviously use production strategies in order to enhance getting their message across, but at times these technique can themself become a source of error.
4. Types of Error Analysis

Many linguists who study the error analysis have a standard that is often called taxonomy. It is useful when to classify the types of any errors that often arise in the second language learner speech and writing. In this context, a linguist, Heidi Dulay formulate Surface Taxonomy Strategy in terms of classification error in the sentence. The types of errors are:

a. Omission

Omission errors are characterized by the absence of an item that must appear in a well-formed utterance. Although any morpheme or word in in a sentence is a potential candidate for omission, some types of morphemes are omitted more than others. Content morpheme carry the bulk of the referential meaning of a sentence: noun, verbs, adjectives, adverbs. For example:

Mary is the president of the new company

The words, mary, president, new and company are the content morphemes that carry the burden of meaning. If one heard

Mary president new company

Dulay Heidi, et. al, Language Two..., p. 148-163
One could deduce meaningful sentence, while if one heard. “is the/ of the” one could not even begin to guess what the speaker might have had in mind.

Is, the and of are grammatical morphemes those little words that play a minor role in conveying the meaning of sentence. They include noun and verb inflections, (the-s in birds, the-s in mothers, the-ed in looked, the-ing in laughing, etc); articles (a, an, the, etc); verb auxillaries (is, will, can, etc); (is, was, am, etc); preposition (in, on, under, etc). Language that are more richly inflected than english use a greater variety of grammatical morphemes.

Language learner omitt grammatical morphemes much more frequently than content words. Within the set of grammatical morphemes, however some like to be omitted for a much longer time than others.

Omission error are found in greater abundance and across a greater variety of morphemes during the early stage of second language acquisition. In intermediete stage, when the learner have been exposed to more of the language, misinformation, misordering or over use of grammatical morphemes are more likely to occur.
b. Addition

Addition error are the opposite of omission. They are characterized by the presence of an item which must not appear in a well-formed utterance. Addition error usually occur in the later stage of language acquisition. There are three types of addition error have been observed. Those are:

1) Double Marking

Double marking it is defined as a failure to delete certain items which are required in some linguistic construction, but not in others. For example in most English sentence some semantic features such as tense may be marked syntactically only once. In a sentence where an auxiliary is required in addition to main verb, the auxiliary not the main verb, takes the tense. Learners who have acquired the tensed form for both auxiliary and verb often place the marker on both, as in:

We did not went here

Because two items rather than one are marked for the same feature (tense, in these example), this type of addition error has been called double marking.
2) Regularizations

When the learner apply the rules used to produce the regular ones to those that are irregular, resulting in errors of regularizations. For examples, sheeps and putted are both regularizations in which the regular plural and past tense markers -s and -ed, respectively have been added to items which do not take markers. Other such errors observed in learner performance includes deer, hitted, and beated.

3) Simple Additions

If an additions errors is not a double marking nor a regularization, it is called simple addition. No particular features characterize simple additions other than those that characterize all addition error—the use of an item which should not appear in a well-formed utterance.

c. Misformation

Misformation errors are characterized by the use of the wrong form of the morpheme or structure. While in omission errors the item is not supplies at all, in misformation errors the learner supplies something, although it is incorrect. As in the case of additions, misformations are usually not random. Thus far, three types of misformations have been frequently reported in literature as follows:

1. Regularization errors,

That fall under the misformation category are those in which a regular marker is used in place of an irregular one, as in runned for ran or gooses for geese.
Regularization errors abound in the verbal output of both first and second language learners, child and adult in host and foreign language learning situations.

2. Archi-forms

When the learner may temporarily select just one of English demonstrative edjectives such as this, that, these, and those to do the work. The selection of one member of a class of forms to represent other in the class is a common characteristics of all stage of second language acquisition, we have called the form selected by the learner an archi-form. The use of archi-form is a typical phenomenon in the acquisitions of a new language.

3. Alternating-forms

Like addition errors, in misformation indicate that some learning has transpired and that barring certain attitudes or environmental circumstances, the learner is on his or her way to target language proficiency. For example, that second language learners use don't as well as no and not to express negation in the first phase of learning English negation, whereas first learner have been observed to use only no and not, producing don't only in the second stage.

d. Misordering

Misordering errors are characterized by the incorrect placement of a morpheme of group of morphemes in an utterance. Misordering errors occurs systematically for both L2 and L1, learners in constructions that have already been acquired, specifically simple and embedded questions. In addition, to these creative misordering errors, students have made written misordering errors that are word-for-word translation of native language surface structure.

5. Steps in Error Analysis

In analyzing learners’ errors, there are some steps which have to be followed. Many linguists have already discussed how to analyze students’ errors in their book. Corder in Ellis’ book, suggests five steps in analyzing students’ errors.\(^\text{10}\) They are: collection of sample of learner language, identification of errors, description of errors, explanation of errors and evaluation of errors.

\(^{10}\)Ellis Rod, The Study ..., p. 47-63.
a. Collection of Sample of Learner Language

The starting point in error analysis is deciding what samples of learner language to use for the analysis and how to collect these samples. We can identify three board types of error analysis according to the size of the sample. A massive samples involves collecting several samples of language use form a large number of learners in order to complie a comprehensif list of error, representative of the entire population. The seond a spesific sample consists of one sample language use collected from a limited number of learners, while an incidental samples involves only one sample of language use produced by a single learner. The errors that learners make can be influenced by a variety factor. Learner with one L1 may make particular error which learners with a different L1 do not. This point to the importance to collecting well-defined sample of learner so that clear statement can be made regarding what kinds of errors the learners produce and under what conditions.

b. Identifications Error

Once a corpus of learner language has been collected, the errors in the corpus have to be indentified. An error can be defined as a deviation from the norms of the target language. First, there is the question regarding which variety of the target language should serve as the norm. Second, concerns the distinction between errors and mistake. An error take place when the deviation arises as a result of lack of knowledge, it represent a lack of competence. Mistake occurs when learner fail to perform their competence. A third question concenr weather the error is overt or covert. An overt error is easy to identify because there is a clear deviation in form. The covert error occurs in utterances that are superficially well-formed but which do not mean what the learner intended them to mean. fourth question concer weather the analysis should examine only deviation in correctness of also deviations in appropriateness.

c. Description of Error

The description of learners errors involves a comparision of the learner idiosyncratic utterance with the reconstraction of those utterances in the target language. It requires therefore attention to the surface properties of the learners utterances. After the error was identified, the next is describe the types of error. An alternative in classifying the errors is to use a surface strategy taxonomy by Dulay, Burt, and Krashen.\textsuperscript{11}

\textsuperscript{11} Ibid, p. 54
Here are the table of examples in describing the errors:

The description of errors like their identification, is problematic. Even if the error itself can be easily identified, it is often problematic to determine what the error consist.

d. Explanation of Error

Assuming that it is possible to identify and describe errors, the next steps is to try to explain them. Explanation is concerned with establishing the source of the error. This stage is more important for SLA research as it involves and attempt to establish the processes responsible for L2 acquisition. As Taylor in Rod Ellis book, points out the error source may reside in psycholinguistics, sociolinguistics, epistemic, or may reside in the discourse structure.¹²

e. Evaluation of Error

Error evaluation involves a consideration of the effect that errors have on the person, addressed. This effect can be gauged either in terms of the addressee’s comprehension of the learners meaning or in terms of the addresses/s affective response to the errors. The design of error evaluation studied involves decisions on who the addresses will be, what errors they will be asked to judge and how they will be asked to judge them.

B. The Concept of Preposition

1. The Definition of Preposition

As a part of the grammatical system, prepositions seem to occur everywhere in speaking and writing. However, it is difficult to learn to use prepositions correctly as most of them have several different functions and there are not many rules to help in choosing which prepositions to use correctly. The learners still struggle with prepositions long after they have achieved a high level of proficiency.

¹²Ibid, p. 57
in English. There are some explanation about preposition will be explained bellow, those are:

Firstly, according to A.S Hornby, preposition is a word or group of word, such as in, from, to, out of and on behalf of, used before a noun or pronoun to show the place, positions, time or method.\(^\text{13}\) However Kosur in Roslim Norwati state that a preposition is a relationship word that expresses a connection to place, time, possession, accompaniment or comparison.\(^\text{14}\)

In line, according to Josef Essberger, The name “preposition” (pre + position) means “place before”.\(^\text{15}\)

Besides, according to Bob Grubic, “preposition is a word placed before a noun or pronoun to define its relationship with another word in the sentence on, under, between, during, with, at.”\(^\text{16}\)

Not only that, Philip Gucker also state that, a preposition (literally, a word that is placed before another word) is the first word in the phrase: to, at, under, with, etc.\(^\text{17}\) It is followed by a word standing for a person or thing, called the object of the preposition. Store, school, table, me, etc., are the objects of the prepositions. The preposition shows a relationship. A thing may be under the table, at the table, on the table, by the table, between the table and the wall (compound object).

Whereas, according to Marjolijn Vespoor and Kim Sauter, prepositions are usually short words like in, on, at, about, with, of, to, by, beside, before, and after. When put in front of a noun phrase, which denotes a person or a thing, the noun phrase changes into a prepositional phrase, denoting a manner, place, time, and so on.

While, Philip Gucker, “preposition is a word that connects the noun or a pronoun to some other word in a sentence-to make a prepositional phrase.”

Nevertheless, Peter Knapp state that a Prepositions locate nouns, pronouns and noun groups in time, space or circumstance. For example, In the morning before the bell rings, children like to play outside. Some common prepositions are: at, on, before, in, from, since, for, during, to, until, after, soon, by, into, on, to, off, out, above, over, unde, below, across, after, around, beside, between, down, past, near, through, without.

20 Knapp Petter, Genre, Text, Grammar (Technologi for Teaching And Assessing Writing), (Australia: University of New South Wales Press Ltd, 2005), P. 60-61
The last, preposition links the complement to some other expression.\textsuperscript{21}

So, from the some definiton above the writer can conclude that the definition of preposition is the word that connect to the other word, to explain the time, place, period, duration, comparision, etc that make the sentence more connective, so the sentence have the meaningful meaning.

2. Types of Preposition

There are some types of preposition in English Language, those are:

a. Preposition of Place

English uses only \textit{to, to} convey motion toward something, whereas italian uses \textit{in, at, by, and on}. Italian choose the preposition on the basis of various features of place.\textsuperscript{22}

A preposition of place is a preposition which is used to refer to a place where something or someone is located. There are only three prepositions of place. However they can be used to discuss an almost endless number of place.\textsuperscript{23}

1) On

Preposition On is used to show the location of the place. Such as to explain the street or the corner when the building is exactly on the corner.\(^4\)

Example:

a) Roy Thompson Hall is On King Street.

b) The Strachona Hotel is On the corner of York street and Wellington street.

2) At

Preposition At is used to explain the location of the place, but not in exactly place. Such as when the building is very near the corner, but not exactly on the corner. Then to explain the street number, when you are giving the exact address of a house or apartment.

Example:

a) City Hall is At the corner of York Street and Queen Street.

b) I live At 479 Jane Street.

Pattern: “at” si very general location-on or around, in or arround. If you are not sure, it is safer to use “at” rather than “on”.

__________________________
3) In

Preposition In is used to explain the place which is specific, for areas with boundaries, explain the volumes, for the large island, for explain the physical place.\(^{25}\)

Examples:

a) I live In the United State of America.

b) That clouds are In the sky.

c) My sisters live In Britain.

d) Your pen is In my briefcase.

b. Preposition of Time

Preposition of time behave somewhat like space: things can happen at a specific moment, or during a period of time, when you talk about duration.

1) On

Preposition On is used to explain the days of the week, the day of the month.\(^{26}\)

Example:

a) On Sunday I went to the zoo.

b) My family and I went to the beach On Tuesday.

2) In

Preposition of In is used to show the moments of the day, show the seasons, show the name of month, for expressing that something will happen by a certain time.

Example:

a) I was breakfast In the morning.

b) My friends and I climbed the mountain to see the sunset In a summer.

c) In October I was visited my aunt on the Arjuna street.

d) My family and I spend time together In one weeks.

3) At

Preposition At is used to show the o’clock, to show the important day, to show the part of the day, explain the age

Example:

a) My train was arrived At 09:00 A.M.

b) My school was contributed At Independence Day.

c) This Cafe opens At noon and close At midnight.

4) By

Preposition of By is used to telling the time, for expressing the end of a period of time in the future.²⁷

²⁷ibid, p. 174
Example:

a) I want to go to Jakara By the end of the day.

b) Try to be there there By 02:00 P.M

5) Since

Preposition of since is used to express the origin in time and continuing action.

Example:

a) We have been here Since 2012.

b) I have been doing my task Since yesterday.

6) For

Preposition of time used for explain the period of time.

Example:

a) He travelled in the desert For six months.

b) They stayed For three weeks.

7) During

Preposition of during is used with known periods of time, such as period by name or periods which have been already defined.\(^\text{28}\)

Example:

a) During the summer.

b) During his childhood.

c) During my holidays.

---

8) Till/Until

Preposition of until is used as a conjunction of time, often used with a negative verb to emphasize lateness.

Example:

a) Let's start now and work till dark.

b) We did not get home till 02:00 P.M.

c) We will stay here till it stops raining.

9) After and Before

Preposition after and before use to tell the time. After must be followed by a noun, pronoun and gerund. If we do not wish to use a noun/pronoun or gerund, we cannot use after but afterwards, after can also be use as a conjunctions.

Example:

a) Do not bathe immediately after a meal.

b) Do not have a meal and bathe immediately afterwards.

c) He always get home before 6:00 O’clock.

d) Call me again after 10:00 o’clock.

c. Preposition of Direction

Preposition of direction is used to express the direction of something. Such as into, to, through and towards.
Example:
1) They are going to the classroom.
2) The snake was coming toward her.
3) He threw a ball into a river.

d. Preposition of Manner

Preposition of manner is use to explain the way something happens or how something is done. They often use the word by. Some example of preposition of manner are by, in, like, on and with.

Example:
1) You can go by bus
2) He fell in his dash for the finishing line
3) He walks like an old man
4) I accept your invitation with pleasure
5) I like to travel on a train.

3. The Example of Using Preposition Error

Here the writer will try to give the example of preposition error. For the more examples and explanation can see as follows:

a. I have knwon him since we were on primary school.\(^{30}\) [FALSE]

The phrase above incorrect because to explain the location of the place, but not in exactly place. Such as when the building is very near the corner, but not exactly on the corner. Then to explain the street number, when you are giving the exact address of a house or apartment, is used At.

b. I have known him since we were at primary school.

[CORRECT]

The classifier decision is: at

c. The training programme will start at the 1\textsuperscript{st} August 1999.

[FALSE]

The phrase above is incorrect, because to show themoment of the day, show the seasons, show the name of month, for expressing that something will happened by a certain time is used In.

d. The training programme will start in the 1\textsuperscript{st} August 1999.

[CORRECT]

The classifier decision is: In

In this research, the writer want to focus to analyze the error on using preposition of time and preposition of place, often because two types of that preposition is often to use by the learner in writing some text.
C. The Concept of Writing Recount Text

1. The Definition of Writing

There are four skills which are taught in the teaching and learning English. They are listening, speaking, reading and writing. These kinds cannot stand alone. They need language components, for example: grammar, vocabulary, pronunciation, to support each skill. Without these language components, those skills will not be perfect. As we know that writing is the most important skill in teaching and learning English. Besides, grammar mastery is important in writing text. Without the correct usage of grammar, the written text will not be understood by the readers, because in written form we do not have direct interaction with the readers as we usually do in speaking. There are some definitions of writing that have been stated by some experts. Those are:

Firstly, According to Sapkota in Allieni Haris states that “writing is an activity of putting down the graphic symbols which has a function to present a language in order to convey some meaning so that the reader can grasp the information which the writer has tried to convey”. Supported by Nunan in Allieni Haris, which also explains that “writing is the process of thinking to invent ideas, thinking about how to express ideas into good writing, and arranging the ideas into statement and paragraph clearly.”

31 Allieni Harris, Mohd. Ansyar, Desmawati Radjab “An Analysis Of Students’ Difficulties In Writing Recount Text At Tenth Grade Of Sma N 1 Sungai Limau” Journal English Language Teaching (ELT), (Padang: English Education Program, State University Of Padang), Volume 2/No 1, p. 1
After that, according to Jeremy Harmer “writing like any other skill, has its “mechanical” components. These include handwriting, spelling, punctuation, and the construction of well-formed sentence, paragraph, and text.”

In line, David Crystal also state that “writing can refer to either process or a result; while we are actively anganged in the process, we are said to be writing and when we have finished the product ( our composition or text) is also called a piece of writing.”

Besides, Trudy Wallace, et.al also states that “Writing is the final product of several separate acts that are hugely challenging to learn simultaneously.”

Whereas, according to “James Heard, and Ted Tucker, “Writing is a continuous process of thinking, organizing, re-thinking and re-organizing. Writing is not a finished product. Writing involves a number of steps or activities. All writers go through the same process, whether they are writing a short letter to a friend or a dissertation for a doctorate degree.”

Moreover the form of a written includes its organization and layout. Form give the information to the reader about the main idea of

34Wallace Truddy, Et.Al, International Academy of Education, (Teaching Sepaking, Listening And Writing),(Unesco: Printed In France By Typhon, Annecy, 2004), P. 15
what to expect, without reading the word, you could probably recognize a written piece by its form of written. The second one is strongly noticed, because it is too important and specific part of writing some text or paragraph.

Based on some definition above, the writer can conclude that writing is a process of making something that used by people to share their idea, their thought, feeling, experience and informations. So, by writing the writer can share a good information to the reader to inform them about something new. Writing also can use to entertain the reader and share the experience to motivate the other people in the world by writing. To describe of appreciate the great ideas or information of people around the world that can product in written text such as book, journal, magazine, novel, diaries, newspaper, comic, etc.

2. Indicators of Writing

As one of productive skill writing is a complex skill. It has several components that are very important to produce a good writing. David P. Haris p.68 states in Suyadi, that are five general components of writing:

- Content: The substance of the writing; the ideas expressed.
- Organization: The organization of the content.

c. Grammar: The employment of grammatical forms and syntactic patterns.

d. Vocabulary: The choice of structures and lexical items to give a particular tone or flavor to the writing.

3. The Process of Writing

In writing, if someone want to write something about information, personal experience, ideas, and the other need some steps of writing process to produce a good writing and the message of the writing can be accepted by the reader correctly. There are Seven steps in the writing process by James Heard and Ted Tucker,\(^\text{37}\) those are:

a. Assessing the Assignment

This step in the process involves determining what is to be written, for whom, and where to get the information needed. Consideration must be given to the audience and the purpose of the composition. The audience will set the tone (style or manner of expression) and vocabulary use. The tone may be serious, humorous, personal, impersonal, formal, or informal. The purpose of the composition will determine the rhetorical form used. Information for the assignment may come from a variety of sources. Your own experiences or background knowledge (which may include your opinions and feelings) or from extended research of a specific topic with information gathered from a library or the Internet. In addition, one must also think about how long the composition needs to be, when it needs to be completed, and for academic papers, the format to be used.

b. Generating Ideas

Brainstorming, clustering, and free writing activities can be used to help the writer develop ideas. Discussion of the topic with classmates or doing limited research in a library may also be used to aid the writer at this step. Keep in mind that if only a paragraph is being written, the topic must be narrowed sufficiently so the topic is not too broad.

c. Organizing Your Ideas

Before writing the first words in any assignment, one must decide on the most logical way to present the information. Depending on the topic, this may include chronological order, order of importance, comparison, or cause and effect organization. Outlining is one method to use when organizing your paper. When outlining, first determine the main topic and list it. After the main topic is listed, supporting ideas are listed under the main topic. When outlining, complete sentences do not need to be used, instead use short phrases. Another method to use to organize your thoughts is a tree diagram. A tree diagram is a more visual format than an outline. In a tree diagram, place the main idea at the top of the page and use lines to connect the supporting ideas to the main point.

The following is a possible outline for a paragraph on the topic. Tree diagram are:

1. GoodCompanions, are affectionate and always available.
2. Independent, are easy to care for and take care of themselves also entertain themselves.
3. Provide service

d. Writing the First Draft

The first draft is written after your ideas are generated and organized through the use of an outline or tree diagram. It is important to consider your first attempt at the assignment as a draft, and not the finished product. During the drafting stage, the focus should be to put the ideas down on paper quickly and not worry about grammar, spelling, etc. Once the first draft is complete, it must be critically reviewed and analyzed to identify grammar, spelling, and punctuation errors in the editing stage. In addition, the writer should ensure that the organization and flow of ideas throughout the paper is smooth, logical, and easily understood by the reader. Start by writing the topic sentence and then develop supporting sentences, following the logical order developed in the outline.
e. Revising

Revision may be done immediately after the drafting stage. Some writers put the work aside and come back to it later. This allows them to attack it with a fresher perspective. Revision involves adding or eliminating material and reorganizing it by moving sentences around so the paragraph is more logical and understandable. During the revision, your concern should be only content and organization, not grammar, spelling, or punctuation.

f. Editing

In reality, editing takes place all the time when writing. In the editing stage the focus is on checking spelling, grammar, punctuation, vocabulary, sentence structure, and page layout.

When editing, check the following points:

1) Spelling
2) Punctuation
3) Grammar
4) Vocabulary
5) Sentence structure
6) Page layout

g. Publishing

In this stage the final copy of the composition is completed the one that will be submitted for review. In most instances the final product should be done on a computer or typed. Handwritten compositions may be difficult to read because of the differences in the quality of handwriting among individuals. Computers or word processing programs should ideally be used on all written assignments. Some people may resist this idea if they have limited typing skills, but in the long run, it could save time and effort. Revisions and editing of the composition are so much easier on a computer or word processor.

4. Three Qualities of Good Writing

Many very different kinds of writing are considered "good" and for many different reasons. There is no formula or program for writing well. However, there are certain qualities that most examples of good writing share. The qualities described here are especially important for academic and expository writing. According to Boardman that stated in Natael Saragih, there are three characteristics in writing a good text or paragraph, namely\textsuperscript{38}.

a. Coherence

A paragraph has coherence when the supporting sentence are ordered according to a principle. The sentences are put in order so that the reader can understand your ideas easily. The principles for \textsuperscript{38} Natael Siragih, Roswita Silalahi, Hilman Perdede, “The Effectiveness Of Using Recount Text To Improve Writing Skill For Grade III Students Of Kalam Kudus Elementary School 2 Pematangsiantar, IOSR Journal Of Humanities And Social Science, (Pematangsiantar: Pstgraduate Program Of Universitas HKBP Nommense), Vol. 19, P. 57 ordering depend on the types of paragraph you are writing. Coherence means stick together, coherence is basically a matter of having the part of a piece of writing in the right with the clear process.

b. Cohesion

Another characteristics of a good paragraph is cohesion. When a paragraph has cohesion, all the supporting sentences content each other in their support of the topic sentence.

c. Unity

The final characteristics of a well-written paragraph is unity. All the supporting sentence should relate to the topic sentence. Order in text of paragraph is like organization easy, but is smaller in space so it may be simpler to consider order as direction. Thus order chronological steps to express the idea the written form.

D. General Concept of Recount Text

1. The Definition of Recount Text

Recount text, basically it is written out to make a report about an experience of a series of related event. A recount is written out to inform an event or to entertain people. Recount text function is to tell an incident in the past. It means that the students are expected to be able to write their past experience by learning recount. Here the writer will explain more about the defintion of recount text by some experts.
Firstly, A S Hornby state that, recount use to tell somebody about something that you have experienced. Then according to Knapp, recount text basically it is written out to make a report about an experience of a series of related event. A recount is written out to inform an event or to entertain people. Recount text is text function as for telling an incident in the past.

In line, M. Arifan Rosyadi also states that recount is a piece of text that retells past events, usually in the order in which they happened. The purpose of a recount text is to give the audience a description of what happened and when it happened.

Whereas, Key Heyland also states that Recounts “tell what happened.” The purpose of a factual recount is to document a series of events and evaluate their significance in some way. The purpose of the literary recount is to relate a sequence of events so that it entertains, and this generally includes the writer’s expressions of attitude about the events.

The last, recount is tell what happened, to reconstruct a chronologically ordered sequence of past events. Recount retell past events, usually in the order in which they happened. It tells the audience what and when events occurred. From some definition above, the writer can conclude that, recount is one of text types that retell about events in the past time. The purpose it to allow the writer or speaker to retell events from the past. This include personal events, factual incidents or imaginary incidents. The intention of it to reconstruct and interpret experience and past events to inform or entertain the audience or reader.

2. The Purpose of Recount Text

A recount reconstruct past events in the time order in which they occurred. Some recount assess the significance, other respond emotively while other critically assess different aspects of events. So, in this text the writer can describe the experience or chronological order to inform or entertain the readers.

3. The Language Features of Recount Text

There are the language feature of recount text. Those are:

a. Introducing personal participants, such as: I, We, Us, My group, etc.

b. Using chronological connections, such as: the first, the second, then, next.

c. Using linking verb, such as: was, were, saw, heard, etc.

45 Barwick Jhon, Et Al, Targeting Text Recount, Procedur, Exposition Upper Level, (Singapore: Green Gilant Press, 2006), P. 4
d. Using action verb, such as: look, go, change, write, walk, etc.

e. Using simple past tense.

4. The Generic Structure of Recount Text

Recount text has several elements, one of which is generic structure. According to M. Arifian Rosyadi, the generic structure as follows:

a. Orientation

The orientation provides all the necessary background information to enable the audience to make sense of the text. Such as introducing the participants, place and time while the story happened. To ensure the orientation is detailed and through, use the words (who, what, when, why, how) the writer or speaker needs to gives information about what happened, who or what was involved, when and where the event occurred and why.

b. Events

In the event the writer describes the series that happened in the past chronologically. It begins from the first event, followed by the second event to the last. The events depend on the creativity of the writer.

Events should be selected carefully to add to audience’s understanding of the topic. Students should be prepared to discard events and details that are unimportant or uninteresting.

A recount in most cases, is more than a “shopping list” of every possible details. Students should be guided to select only those events that are relevant and that can be expanded through the inclusion of specific details.

c. Re-orientation

The final section is re-orientation, it is optional. Stating personal comment of the writer to the reader. It concludes the recount by summarizing outcomes or results, evaluating the topic’s importance or offering personal comment or opinion. It can also look to the future by speculating about what might happen next. So, not all of recounts closed by re-orientation.

5. Types of Recount Text

There are some types of recount text. Those are:

a. Personal Recounts

Personal recounts are retelling an activity the writer has been personally involved in and may be used to build the relationship between the writer and the reader. For examples of personal recounts are: diary entry, and personal letter.

Example:

Camping with my friends

My name is Danu, I live in Bandung. Last weekend, on June 2017, my friends and I went camping. We reached the camping ground after we walked for about one hour from the parking lot. We built the camp near to a small river. It was getting darker and colder, so we built a fire camp.

The next day, at 09.00 A.M, we spent our time to observing plantation while the girls preparing meals. In the afternoon we went to the river and caught some fish for supper. At night, we held a fire camp night. We sang, danced, read poetry, and played magic tricks, and even some of us performed a standing comedy.

On Monday, after we take a breakfast at 07.00 A.M, we packed our bags and got ready to go home together by car. That was very pleasant moment with my friend that I ever got.

b. Factual Recount

Factual recount is a documents as series of events sequentially and evaluates their significance. At this stage recount involves detailed research about unfamiliar topics for which students should be using print and technological resources. For examples of factual recounts are: police reconstruction of an accident, and biographical and/or autobiographical recounts.

Example:

Children’s day

On children’s day in 1999, technology company treated more that 200 underprivileged children to a “high-tech” experience. They were given training on information technology.

The company wanted to provide opportunities for these children to learn more about the internet and the latest technology. They wanted to help the less fortunate in the community

The children had an enjoyable and educational experience that day. They were exposed to the new technology for the first time and they were very interested. The company hoped to conduct many more such training sessions for these children. They felt that the skill the children had would be useful to them when they grew up.

The company was very active in caring for the less fortunate. They even put aside one day a year for their employees to do volunteer work to help the needy. They also donated money to many charitable organisations.

47 Barwick Jhon, Et Al, Targeting Text..., P. 4
Many people had benefited from their efforts. May also praised the company for being so generous towards the needy.

c. Imaginative Recount

Imaginative recount is telling about the role that is both imaginative and imaginary connecting events.\textsuperscript{48}

Example:

\textbf{The First Day Activities of The Princess}

Being a princess is never an easy task. That also applied for Princess Adelle. Her day was never easy. Her schedules had always been prepared beforehand by the royal assistant. She barely had any free day. Sometimes, even on national holidays, she got a schedule. That day was not very different.

It was the first day of 2017 and Princess Adelle was very tired because she was up all night, attending The New Year’s Eve event in the Royal Palace. Although she could barely sleep, she tried to wake up early. She woke up at 6 a.m. She should be ready before 8 a.m., so she washed herself and put on the dress that had been prepared for her by her assistant. After that, she had breakfast with the member of the royal family. At 9 a.m., she went to a charity event for the orphans held by several social institutions of the country. The event finished right before the time for lunch, so Princess Adelle enjoyed her lunch with the company of social workers and the orphan children. After lunch, she continued her schedule to attend the inauguration of a new public school near the palace. She gave her speech there mentioning that she was very happy to be invited to the event. She hoped that the new school would be able to help the students to be successful in the future.

She arrived back at the palace at 3 p.m. and attended her riding class with her instructor. Horse riding was able to make her happy again and she could refresh her mind after a long day activities outside the palace. She finished her riding class at 6 p.m. and prepared herself for dinner with the member of the royal family. She was very relieved that the family dinner finished early. She finally went back to her room at 8 p.m. She threw herself in bed immediately because she felt really tired and wanted to take a rest so badly.

One day felt so long for Princess Adelle and it was only one sample of her schedules for a day. Sometimes, the schedules were even tighter than this.

\textsuperscript{48}Suyadi, “An Analysis of...,” p.7
Princess Adelle knew that it was one of her duty as a princess. She enjoyed it, because she could meet different kinds of people from her activities.

The writer just want to focus with one types of recount text, thats called personal recount. The reason to choose this types because almost the students when they wrote the text, they explain their stories. For example the story of their holidays in past time, etc.
CHAPTER III

RESEARCH METHOD

A. Types and Characteristic of The Study

There are two types of research. Those are: qualitative and quantitative research. In this research the writer is going to use the qualitative research based on the title above. Before know about the qualitative research, the writer will introduce first about the definition of qualitative research itself to make more understand before doing the research. There are some definition of qualitative research, those are:

Firstly, according to Jhon Creswell, Qualitative research is a means for exploring and understanding the meaning individuals or groups ascribe to a social or human problem. The process of research involves emerging questions and procedures. Data typically collected in the participant’s setting. Data analysis inductively building from particulars to general themes, and the researcher making interpretations of the meaning of the data. The final written report has a flexible structure. Those who engage in this form of inquiry support a way of looking at research that honors an inductive style, a focus on individual meaning, and the importance of rendering the complexity of a situation (adapted from Creswell. 2007).

Secondly, according to Gary Anderson and Nancy Arsenault, “Qualitative research is a form of inquiry that explores phenomena in their natural settings and uses multi-methods to interpret, understand, explain and bring meaning to them. Qualitative research is an inductive form of inquiry whose results are a blend of research skill, luck and a particular perspective”.2

\(^1\)Creswell W. Jhon, Research Design, (California: SAGE Publication Inc, 2009), 3\(^{th}\) edition, P. 4

Thirdly, according to Donald Ary, “Qualitative research seek to understand a phenomenon by focusing on the total picture rather than breaking it down into variables. The goal is a holistic picture and depth of understanding rather than a numeric analysis of data.”3

Based on some definition above, the writer can conclude that qualitative research is one of research that focused on the describing, thinking, analyzing rather than use the numeric to analyze the data.

Based on the explanation above, the writer conducted this research at SMPN 3 Batanghari Lampung Timur. In this research, the writer will investigate and analyze the students error on using preposition in writing recount text at the eight grade of SMPN 3 Batanghari Lampung Timur. The representation will be shown by using the informative and detailed data of using preposition in writing recount text. It aims to encourage students knowledge and ability about the use of preposition in writing recount text.

B. Data Resource

Basically, data resource are divided into two types, those are:

1. Primary Data

   Primary data was data that have been collected by first-hand observation. It means that the writer would collect the data from the students among the eighth grade at SMPN 3 Batanghari Lampung Timur in writing the recount text, and interview result of the students at SMPN 3 Batanghari Lampung Timur of writing recount text would be obtained by the writer as an object of this research.

2. Secondary Data

   Secondary data can take from the other source such as book, article, english dictionary, e-journal, and the documentation that are related to the research. It is aimed to enrich the primary data.

C. Data Collecting Technique

   In this study, the writer will conduct this research to select student’s error on using preposition in writing recount text among the eighth grade at SMPN 3 Batanghari Lampung Timur, as the object of writer.

   Therefore, the data would be gained through several techniques as follows:

   1. Documentation

      Qualitative researchers may use written documents or other artifacts to gain an understanding of the phenomenon under study.

      The term documents here refers to a wide range of written, physical, and visual materials, including what other authors may term artifacts. Documents may be personal, such as autobiographies, diaries, and letters; official, such as files, reports, memoranda, or minutes; or documents of popular culture, such as books, films, and videos.\textsuperscript{4} This data is easy to get, it is not reactive so that the subject can not hide something from the writer. Based on the explanation above the writer use the documentation as one of instrument to collect the data like the student’s document at SMPN 3 Batanghari Lampung Timur, the history of the school, the total teachers, the total rooms, etc, that needed in this research.

2. Interview

In line, the writer also use the interview to collect the data that needed to enrich the data, such as list of interview questions or interview guidance. It purpose to know what are the reason of the students did the error on using preposition in writing recount text. In qualitative interviews, the writer conducts face-to-face interviews with the participants, interviews participants by face to face, telephone, or engages in focus group interviews, with six to eight interviewees in each group. These interviews involve unstructured and generally open-ended questions that are few in number and intended to elicit views and opinions from the

\textsuperscript{4}Ary Donald, Et Al, Introduction To..., P. 442
The interview is probably the most widely used method of data collection in educational research. Interviews can be conducted on all subjects by all types of interviewers and they can range from informal incidental sources of data to the primary source of information used in a research study. When used with care and skill, interviews are an incomparably rich source of data, but seldom are inexperienced researchers sufficiently familiar with the requirements for a good interview or sufficiently practiced in the requisite interviewing skills. Perhaps the commonness of the interview is its major downfall. We use interviews in all walks of life for a wide range of purposes and to use it for research purposes requires more care and skill than is commonly exercised. While everyone conducts interviews to some degree, few do it well.\(^6\)

3. Observation

Last instrument that writer used in this research was observation. In qualitative research, observation is one of way to collect the data. As Jhon W. Creswell said that “Qualitative observations are those in which the researcher takes field notes on the behavior and activities of individuals at the research site”. The object of this observation is the student’s at SMPN 3 Batanghari Lampung Timur, and the data will take from this observation is like the observation when their make hand writing about recount

\(^5\)Creswell W. Jhon, Research Design: Qualitative, Quantitative, And Mixed Methods Approaches (2nd Ed), (New Delhi, Sage: Publications, 2003), P. 181
\(^6\)Anderson Gary With Nancy Arsenault, Fundamentals Of ..., P. 202
text or writing product. In these field notes, the writer records, in an unstructured or semistructured way (using some prior questions that the inquirer wants to know), activities at the research site. Qualitative observers may also engage in roles varying from a nonparticipant to a complete participant.7

D. Data Analysis Technique

In qualitative research analysis process and interpretation data need creative thinking, critical and careful. Data analysis is a process to get pattern or regular form. While interpretation data is a process giving a meaning toward pattern or regularity which be find in research.

The process analysis data can begin with beating whole data, that succeeded be gather from source various is interview, observation, and documentation. And then the next is abstraction. Abstraction is efforts to make summarize from anything data. Creswell mentioned that there are six steps in analyzing data, those are:8

1. Organize and prepare the data for analysis

   This involves transcribing interviews. Optically scanning material. Typing up field notes, or sorting and arranging the data into different types depending on the sources of information.

2. Read through all the data

   A first step is to obtain a general sense of the information and to reflect on its overall meaning. What general ideas are participants saying? What is the tone of the ideas? What is the impression of the overall depth, credibility, and use of the information? Sometimes qualitative researchers write notes in margins or start recording general thoughts about the data at this stage.

7Creswell W. Jhon, Research design..., p. 181
8Ibid, p. 185-189.

3. Begin detailed analysis with a coding process

   Coding is the process of organizing the material into chunks or segments of text before bringing meaning to information. It involves taking text data or pictures gathered during data collection, segmenting sentences (or paragraphs) or images into categories, and labeling those categories with a term, often a term based in the actual language of the participant (called an in vivo term).

4. Use the coding process to generate a description of the setting or people as well as categories or themes for analysis.

   Description involves a detailed rendering of information about people, places, or events in a setting. Researchers can generate codes for this description. This analysis is useful in designing detailed descriptions for case studies, ethnographies, and narrative research projects. Then use the coding to generate a small number of themes or categories, perhaps five to seven categories for a research study.
5. Advance how the description and themes will be represented in the qualitative narrative.

The most popular approach is to use a narrative passage to convey the findings of the analysis. This might be a discussion that mentions a chronology of events, the detailed discussion of several themes (complete with subthemes, specific illustrations, multiple perspectives from individuals, and quotations) or a discussion with interconnecting themes. Many qualitative researchers also use visuals, figures, or tables as adjuncts to the discussions. They present a process model (as in grounded theory), advance a drawing of the specific research site (as in ethnography), or convey descriptive information about each participant in a table (as in case studies and ethnographies).

6. A final step in data analysis involves making an interpretation or meaning of the data.

These lessons could be the researcher's personal interpretation, couched in the understanding that the inquirer brings to the study from her or his own culture, history, and experiences. It could also be a meaning derived from a comparison of the findings with information gleaned from the literature or theories. In this way. Authors suggest that the findings confirm past information or diverge from it.
The data analysis above is by Jhon W Creswell model.
E. Research Approach

In this study, the writer conduct the case study approach to the writer intention that is to analyze students error on using preposition in writing recount text among the eighth grade at SMPN 3 Batanghari Lampung Timur. However, the writer more focused among the eighth grade. In this case, the writer adopted Donald Ary, Lucy Cheser Jacobs, et al in doing this approach. The following are several steps to conduct this approach. Those are:

1. Selecting a problem

   The first step is to select the problem to investigate. The problem should be consequential enough to warrant investigation. Also, the answer to the problem is not already available, but the means for finding answers are available. Qualitative researchers begin with a general topic of interest. The problem statement may ask the “why” or “how” of certain phenomena. For example, “How do elementary classroom teachers deal with aggressive children?” or “How do high school students become alienated from their peers?”

2. Reviewing the literature on the problem.

   Researchers should thoroughly review the relevant literature to gain more understanding and insight into the problem and to determine what research may already have been

9Ary Donald, et al, Introduction to..., P. 31-33 done. The beginning researcher will likely turn to the literature for help in locating and formulating a researchable problem.

3. Designing the research.

The investigator next plans how to conduct research to answer the question. The design is the researcher’s plan for the study, which includes the method to be used, what data will be gathered, where, how, and from whom. In qualitative research, the design is flexible and may change during the investigation if appropriate. The design of qualitative research is thus often described as “emergent.”

4. Collecting the data.

The next step involves executing the research plan. Qualitative researchers also have a toolbox of data-gathering techniques, including indepth interviewing, participant observation, and document analysis.

5. Analyzing the data.

The data collected in research must be analyzed. Qualitative data generally take the form of words (descriptions, observations, impressions, recordings, and the like). The researcher must organize and categorize or code the large mass of data so that they can be described and interpreted. Although the qualitative researcher does not deal with statistics, analyzing qualitative data is not easy. It is a time-consuming and painstaking process.

6. Interpreting the findings and stating conclusions.

   The researcher next tries to interpret the findings in terms of the research problem. Qualitative researchers present their interpretations and explanations in narrative form. They do not talk about probability but try to emphasize the trustworthiness and credibility of the findings.

7. Reporting results.

   Researchers must make their procedures, findings, and conclusions available in a form intelligible to others who may be interested.

B. General Description of Research Data

The objective of this research was to analyze the errors on using preposition and describe the result of students writing recount text and interview guidance. This research was conducted among the eighth grade at SMPN 3 Batanghari Lampung Timur. The subject of this research was 32 students as the respondents.

The writer tried to discuss the result of the writing recount text that made by the students among the eighth grade at SMPN 3 Batanghari Lampung Timur. The first, the students retell their own story in the past time on the paper by using some types of preposition, such as: preposition of time and preposition of place (on, it, in, etc). The next, the writer gave the students six questions based on the topic. The questions will be answered by the 32 respondent. There are the result of analysis as follows:

1. Preposition of time

The calculation of error percentage per-item was computed with formula:

\[ \text{Number of errors} \times 100\% \]
\[ \text{Total number} \]

Error in preposition of time (ON) : \( \frac{27}{76} \times 100\% = 35.53\% \)
Error in preposition of time (AT) : \( \frac{12}{76} \times 100\% = 15.79\% \)
Error in preposition of time (IN) : \( \frac{37}{76} \times 100\% = 48.68\% \)

From the description above, the writer can deduce that the students still confuse and difficult on using preposition.
Based on the data analysis above, the writer found several error. Those are preposition of time (on, at, in) and preposition of place (on, at, in). In this case, the writer found 27 items error of preposition of time (ON) or 35.53%, then 12 items error of using preposition of time (AT) or 15.79%, and 37 items error on using preposition of time (IN) or 48.68%. So the totals of error on using preposition of time is 76 items of error or 87.36%.
2. Preposition of place

The calculation of error percentage per-item was computed with formula:

\text{Number of errors} \times 100\% \\
\text{Total number}

Error in preposition of place (ON) \( = \frac{2}{11} \times 100\% = 18.18\%

Error in preposition of place (AT) \( = \frac{8}{11} \times 100\% = 72.73\%

Error in preposition of place (IN) \( = \frac{1}{11} \times 100\% = 9.09\%

Besides, the writer also analyzed the use of preposition of place, the writer found 2 items of error on using preposition of place (ON) or 18.18%, then 8 items of error on using preposition of place (AT) or 72.73%, and 1 items of error on using preposition of place (IN) or 9.09%. So, the error that was found on using preposition in writing recount text among the eighth grade at SMPN 3 Batanghari Lampung Timur as much 11 items or 12.64%.

3. Preposition of time and preposition of place

The calculation of error percentage per-item was computed with formula:

\text{Number of errors} \times 100\% \\
\text{Total number}

Error in preposition of time \( = \frac{76}{87} \times 100\% = 87.36\%

Error in preposition of place \( = \frac{11}{87} \times 100\% = 12.64\%
So, the use of preposition error of time and place, the writer found 87 items of error on using preposition of time or 87.36% and 11 items of error on using preposition of place or 12.64%.
